

The Brewers Forum brings together Europe's brewers, and it's back for a second round

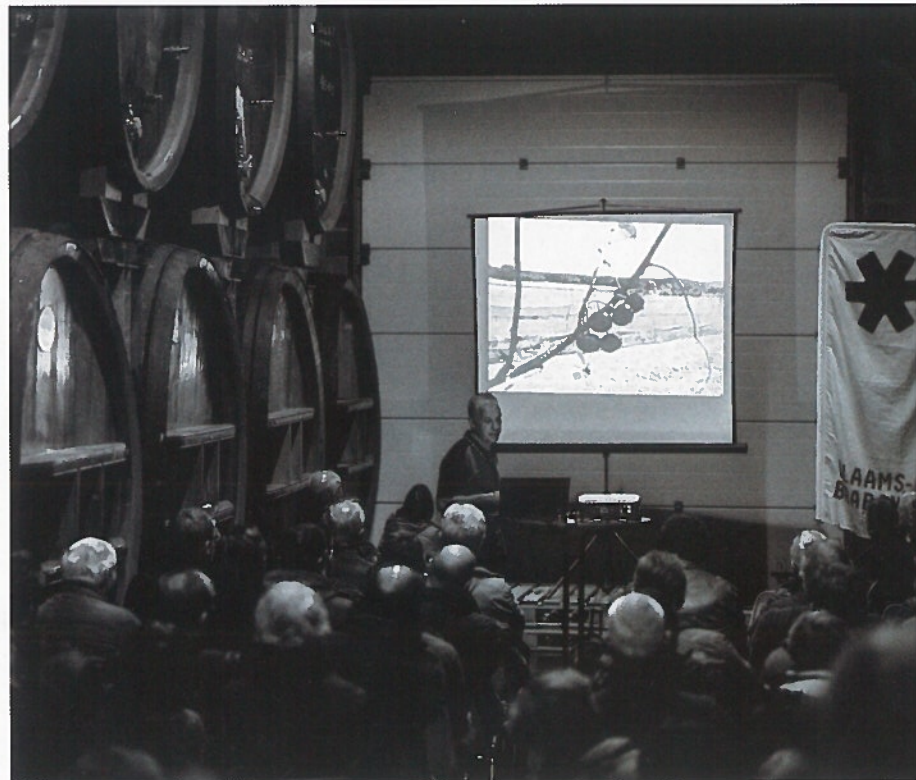

June 3 and 4, 2019 in Antwerp

After a successful inauguration last June, the Brewers of Europe Forum aims to go even further for its second edition. Last year proved to be another fruitful year for the European beer industry. The new generation continues to impress with its creative ideas while the largest breweries aim to invest in and promote the qualities of good European beer. That sort of expansion deserves another event dedicated to bringing professionals into the spotlight.

Once again, the Forum is open to anyone involved in, or with an interest in, the brewing sector in Europe, bringing together brewers of all sizes and helping to create a real community. Embracing the present and promoting the latest trends while keeping an eye on the future will once again be at the heart of the event. This year, the Forum will be held in Antwerp – a vibrant and modern city with an arty twist that will certainly conquer the heart of speakers and attendees alike. Technical tours and site visits to Antwerp's vibrant brewery scene are part of the programme.

In 2019 the Forum is organised together with the 37th European Brewery Convention Congress. From developing methods used worldwide for modern quality control procedures in brewing, its raw materials and its products, the EBC shares knowledge among the finest research groups and brew-masters from every corner in the world.

Europe's passion for tasty, creative and high-quality beer stayed high last year. The European Renaissance seems unstoppable, as last year another 1,000 breweries opened to show their love for the beverage that brings us all together. To strengthen the bonds within the community, the Brewers Forum will invite various professionals to talk about their expertise and share tips for fellow experts and for newcomers alike.

The Brewers Forum is bringing the world of brewing together, with brew-masters, brewery owners, sector executives and everyone in between joining together for debates and discussions about the future of beer. Multiple exhibitors will be part of the event as well, as a means of showcasing their products and their experience.

As traditional beer-producing countries continue to thrive, and newcomers cement their place in the sector, the Brewers Forum aims to become the new reference point for beer-related conventions. But that objective can only be achieved with the help of a strong and dedicated community, relying on mutual aid to grow into something even better. 🍷
